Fall 2009 Training Catalog
Special offer for Certified Clinical Supervisors

Clinical Supervision:

Teaching Others How to Solve Ethical Dilemmas

One of the greatest challenges to clinical supervisors is that of assisting the supervisee to become increasingly competent to function on their own, and in time, possibly become the supervisor of others. The area of greatest challenge within this goal is in assisting supervisees in navigating the "gray" that is often present when sorting through ethical dilemmas. The natural desire of the supervisee is for the answers to be black and white and without variation. However, variation is inherent in almost all types of ethical dilemmas as each involves different individuals, contextual factors, and circumstances. Workshop meets the requirements for CCS certification and recertification requirements.
