Overview of the Certification Process

This certification overview course is often the first bit of contact people have with the CCB, and with good reason. It outlines, from beginning to end, the process of becoming credentialed with the CCB. It is a required course for those seeking the CIT credential and is offered monthly, thanks to the assistance of the DMHAS Office of Workforce Development. Pre-registration is required and walk-ins cannot be accepted due to space limitations. A no-show may restrict your ability to register for other free trainings offered by the CCB. Information on available dates is located on the CCB website. PLEASE NOTE THAT THIS IS NOT INTENDED TO PROVIDE INFORMATION ON THE LICENSING PROCESS (LADC) IN CONNECTICUT. Any information on licensure must come directly from the Department of Public Health Practitioner Licensing and Investigations Section.

This training is at Connecticut Valley Hospital in Middletown and requires registration.

Individual Coaching Sessions

Coaching sessions are designed to work with individual candidates to provide technical assistance around specific workforce development and certification goals. These sessions are intended for individuals that have completed a certification process course and have specific questions about the certification process and application submission standards. Attendees are expected to bring all applicable application materials for review to the session. This opportunity to meet with a CCB staff member one-on-one is not intended for general credentialing questions or an overall review of standards.
